Amy Alward, CMT Instructor
Certified Infant Massage Teacher
Certified Pediatric Massage Therapist
Certified Kinesio Tape Therapist

Some of us find our true calling late in life. At 45, Amy realized that decades of blood, sweat, and tears in an academic field were not feeding her soul. She is a California state Certified Massage Therapist (CMT), certified with the NCBTMB both as a therapist, and as a provider of continuing education. Her specialties were carefully chosen to address multi-dimensional pain relief for her clients: body, mind, emotions and spirit. Manual therapies include: Sports massage, myofascial release (using the principles of Tom Myers and Anatomy Trains), trigger point release, kinesio taping (CKTP), and pediatric massage (CPMT, CIMT with specialties in autism and cancer). As a Usui/Holy Fire II Reiki and Holy Fire II Karuna™ Reiki Master, Amy is recognized internationally as a powerful Reiki healer. Jennifer Miller CMT

Instructor: Self Care for Massage Therapists

Jenni owns and operates Prana Endura Therapeutic Massage and Yoga. The purpose of her practice is to empower other people to achieve their wellness goals. She is currently a Certified Massage Therapist and Registered Yoga Instructor working and collaborating with other health care professionals in the Chico area as she continues her education in Medical Anthropology. She specializes in various therapeutic bodywork modalities, particularly Ashiatsu, or massage with her feet. Her passion is helping people acquire quality health care that is in harmony with their cultural and personal beliefs, and that all people deserve good health and good medical care, regardless of income, gender, culture, sexual orientation, religion, or any other socioeconomic factor. Her personal philosophy is that massage is an inherently spiritual act. It offers a person an opportunity to get to know his or her own body's energy and needs in greater detail, to learn to trust another person as caretaker, and to learn to let go and relax. However, she asserts that massage is definitely not just spiritual. She's constantly gratified by how much research continues to verify and support the practice as a viable and legitimate alternative to many mainstream drugs and surgeries. Research shows that the simple act of touching and being touched has long-term, profound health benefits including mood alleviation, overall longevity, and heightened cognitive functionality, as well as incredible relief for conditions like sciatica, plantar fasciitis, chronic shin splints, and migraine headaches.

Shiatsu/Tuina (Acupressure for CMTS - 20 hours)

Instructor: Michael Turk L.Ac.

Acupressure's 28 Great Points

Friday, Saturday, and Sunday

(10 Hours lecture/demonstration: theory, anatomy, and physiology; 10 hours guided hands-on practice using Touch Your Memory methods)

Course Description

Acupoint therapy is the root of Chinese acupuncture with a tradition going back at least 3,000 years. Acupressure evolved into modern Asian massage techniques. In China, gentle anmo—rub and press—massage and deep tissue tuina—stroke and pinch—were developed; while in Japan, shiatsu—finger acupressure—massage emerged. Students will learn how to integrate acupressure into their massage practice thus offering the pain relieving benefits of acupressure to their clients. Because acupressure reduces most pain quickly and with less effort, the massage practitioner benefits by expending less energy.

Ancient texts clearly state the goal of stimulating acupoints is a qi sensation called deqi. Acupoints when properly located and stimulated are known by specific qi sensations, energy feelings that accompany the reduction of pain. Named acupoints are found at specific anatomical locations and produce unique sensations that indicate the qi energy is flowing. The most powerful acupoints for relieving pain are hidden. An ancient medical text described a test to locate hidden acupoints. When located and stimulated correctly, hidden acupoints produce the most powerful qi sensations.

The class will include lecture, discussion, demonstration, and practice, giving students an opportunity to learn how to locate and stimulate 28 acupoints thus producing qi sensations. Students will also be taught methods of locating, evaluating, and stimulating hidden acupoints.

Learning Goals

Students who prepare for and participate in “Shiatsu/Tuina” will develop a deep understanding of the Chinese theory of yinyang and how yin and yang guide the practice of acupressure. They will know how to correctly locate 28 acupoints using anatomical markers. Students will be able to analyze the state of health of their clients and themselves and use that evaluation in the application of acupressure treatments to reduce pain and increase energy and vitality. They will be able to analyze the pain of their clients and use that evaluation to guide the application of acupressure treatments using a step-by-step approach.

Student Responsibilities

To prepare for the class, the following reading and exercises are suggested from Pain’s Healing Secret. To prepare for discussions on healing, qi energy, types of pain, and how to locate acupoints read the following sections:

- The Experience of Pain, pages 1-18
- The Experience of Qi Energy, pages 19-28
- Traditional Chinese Medicine, pages 51-96
- Key concepts to remember (at the end of each acupoint chapter) between pages 97-196
- Also from Pain’s Healing Secret exercises:
- Survey your body for energy-pain sensations on page 22
- Use the method described that can produce a qi sensation—Rapid Healing, pages 23-5
- Locate the 28 acupoints covered in the book; see “Key concepts...”
- Evaluate your health according to yin and yang—Yinyang Theory, pages 60-86

Acupressure Theory 20 hours

Instructor: Michael Turk L.Ac.

- Acupressure theory guides practice in treating pain and disease.
- 10 Hours lecture/discussion: theories of yin/yang and five elements
- 10 Hours exercises: yin/yang and five element thinking
- For General Information: "Betty" at (530) 213-3332 or Bmamag@gmail.com

The study of Chinese medicine trains the mind in pattern recognition for the evaluation of pain and other disorders to restore balance and health. Patterns of two describe opposites (yinyang), patterns of three describe levels (heaven, earth, and human), patterns of four describe time and space (seasons and directions), and patterns of five describe interactive phases of change (five elements).

Specifically this course teaches a method of thinking from the mind of the ancient Chinese doctor. The early Chinese developed theories of medicine based on number patterns rooted in a network of associations and terms. This correlated symbolic system of terms forms a multi-dimensional pattern. These spatial relationships describe predictable changes that guide action.

It is possible to educate your intuition. Intuition is that flash of insight that sheds light into darkness or simply a gut feeling. Ideas connect in the subconscious mind, the part of the mind that uses symbolic associations. Yinyang thinking and the five steps of energy creation and regulation are ancient principles that guide the transformation of energy from blocked and painful to free flowing and pain-free!

Learning Goals

Know how to apply acupressure at specific acupoints to stimulate the desired effect. Students will develop a rich understanding of the theories of yinyang and the five elements. Learn to evaluate the unwanted disorder with the signs and symptom in relation to the patient with a specific constitution. Establish a Chinese correlative cosmological department in the visual/spatial part of the brain.

Schedule

Friday: Introduction and discussion to introduce the different functions of the right brain and the left brain, information science east and west, Chinese correlative cosmology. Discuss the theories of qi, yinyang, five elements and etc.

Saturday and Sunday: Based on the theories introduced Friday participate in interactive practice by writing and recalling and imaginative storytelling with a partner and in class.

Neuromuscular Therapy (NMT) is a highly specialized form of massage which focuses on the nervous system in order to address pain or health problems of the skeletal and muscular systems. It is a system of soft tissue massage techniques that aim to balance the central nervous system with the musculoskeletal system to correct any disorders brought about as a result of any imbalances between the two. Neuromuscular therapy enhances the function of joints and muscles, and speeds healing by facilitating the release of endorphins. Neuromuscular therapy aims to restore homeostasis between the two systems. It helps to address the underlying causes of pain, spasm, or tension. Neuromuscular therapy has a holistic approach towards healing in that emphasis is laid on stimulating the body to heal itself. NMT techniques are used to stimulate soft-tissue repair in the affected areas.

Benefits of Neuromuscular Therapy: The American Academy of Pain Management recognizes Neuromuscular Therapy as an effective treatment for specific pain points. Dysfunctions such as acute to chronic pain resulting from occupational, sports and/or automobile injuries, benefit from receiving Neuromuscular Therapy. Specific types of dysfunctions and repetitive motion and accumulative traumas respond well to this treatment, including sciatica, rotator cuff dysfunction, carpal tunnel and thoracic outlet syndrome, pain issues, Sciatica, Piriformis syndrome, TMJ, and migraines. – also problems with numbness and tingling in the extremities (arms, legs, hands, or feet).
